

Education Quality Team
Staff Report for 10 January 2023

From the Education Quality Division: Patrick Halladay, Division Director

While we are still cleaning up from the extended 2022 licensing season, we are about to embark on the 2023 season. We have pushed the date where we will open the system for renewals to 1 February in order to make sure we have all criminal background checks from 2022 complete. The office sent out a notification to all educators with expiring licenses notifying them of the date that the system will open and steps to take in preparation. There are about 3,500 expiring licenses this year. This is a substantially smaller number than we saw over the past few years as we no longer have the overlap of expiring five- and seven-year licenses.

The office has received a couple of requests for the board to extend the licensing window in a similar manner as 2022 to allow educators to complete professional learning. At this point, we are not recommending this action but, rather, to continue to monitor the need through conversations with L/RSBs.

Endorsement revisions are moving along, and we are currently working on School Counselor, Early Childhood Education, and Special Educator. Unfortunately, the effects on educators' capacity are carrying over into this process, as engagement has been increasingly lack luster as the school year progresses. Participants are enthusiastic and providing great input when available, but it is clear that priorities are understandably elsewhere. Andrew will continue to adapt and accommodate to ensure the widest range of viewpoints are included in the process.

An educator had an extension of the limit on substitute teaching extended through 1 March 2023 at the request of Addison Central Supervisory District. He will be completing his coursework at the end of the month and graduating in February. It will take additional time for his transcript with a recommendation to be sent to him, allowing for an application for initial licensure.

Finally, I announced to the division that I will be leaving the Agency of Education effective 20 January. I was offered and accepted the role of Director of Educator Licensure at UVM. While I will continue to be intimately involved in issues of licensure and education preparation, it will be from the other side of the conversation moving forward. Working with the board over the past four years has been one of the pleasures of this position. In responding to pressing needs during COVID and the subsequent impact on the educator pipeline and interrogating our existing policies and practices to ensure equity, the board has continually distinguished itself as a thoughtful and pragmatic deliberative body. Thank you for the hours of provocative conversation.

We expect an interim director to be named presently.

From the Education Quality Division: Ron Ryan, Education Programs Manager
