Barre, VT. – Governor Phil Scott, along with the Agency of Education and the Department of Public Safety will host an all-day conference for public and independent schools focused on preventing school violence on November 30, 2017 at the Sheraton Hotel in South Burlington, Vermont.

More than 250 school executive leaders, members of Vermont's first response community, mental health providers, and school crisis planning team members will gather for the day-long individual and organizational resiliency after a critical incident.

Secretary of Education Rebecca Holcombe and Rob Evans, Vermont school safety liaison officer, will open the conference at 9 a.m.
